

The 4th International Conference on Natural Resource Management and Public Policy October 22-25, 2021 · Wuhan, China

Background

The Fourth International Conference on Natural Resource Management and Public Policy provides a platform for domestic and international experts and scholars to enhance academic exchange and international cooperation and advance acknowledgement of the newest research results on the adequate supply of natural resource management. The conference will be organized by Huazhong Agricultural University, where the first, second and third conferences have been successfully held with great attention and recognition. This conference aims to explore the related issues and countermeasures of an adequate supply of natural resource management in China and the rest of the world. Internationally renowned scholars and policymakers will be brought together to present and discuss their insights and suggestions.
